Arafat ejected from Islamic militant's funeral

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — Islamic militants knocked off Yasser Arafat's headdress, called him a traitor and threw him out of a mosque funeral Thursday in his worst political embarrassment as head of the Palestinian government.

Enraged mourners fired guns wildly into the air as a phalanx of police guards whisked Arafat away from the chaotic service for Hani Abed, a militant leader killed by a car bomb the fundamentalists blamed on Israel.

"Arafat is a collaborator" shouted members of the extremist Islamic Jihad movement as Arafat was shoved out a back door of the Omari mosque.

The scene underscored the growing extremist opposition Arafat has faced in the Gaza Strip since Palestinian self-rule began in May.

The PLO leader is wedged between Israeli demands to crack down on Muslim fundamentalists responsible for deadly attacks on Israeli civilians, and the need to win their support for self-rule.

Abed died Wednesday after a bomb exploded when he opened the trunk of his car. He had been detained by Palestinian police for 18 days in June on suspicion of helping plan an attack at the Erez border crossing into Israel in which two soldiers were killed.

Polls show voters undecided as election nears

WASHINGTON — Less than a week before Election Day, polls in several major contests show that a remarkably high number of voters are undecided; some repulsed by the nasty campaigns, some unsure they will vote at all.

"You have these intensely negative campaigns on both sides," said Democratic media adviser Mandy Grunwald. "People are not knowing what to believe and are looking for a referee."

Whatever the reason, these undecided voters have made several races that loom large in the fight for Senate control extraordinarily volatile heading into the campaign's final weekend.

Republicans are increasingly confident of capturing the majority because computer turnout models designed to weed undecided voters from polling show a major GOP edge.

Serbs lose part of town to Croat-Muslim troops

BUGOJNO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs lost at least part of a strategic town Thursday to the first major combined military offensive of the war by Muslim-led government troops and their Bosnian Croat allies.

U.N. officials could not confirm the fall of Kupres, a town of 3,500 in central Bosnia that has been under joint Croat-Muslim attack since last week.

But Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic congratulated government soldiers for their part in capturing Kupres, Sarajevo radio reported late Thursday.

"Be convinced that your victory of today illuminates the path of the further liberation of occupied parts of our country," Izetbegovic was quoted as saying.

Croatian TV reported the Bosnian Croat militia "liberated" Kupres, capturing a huge amount of ammunition and equipment and leaving the bodies of Serb defenders lying on the road leading into town from the south.

It showed what is said was footage of Bosnian Croat militiamen in the town, some holding a sign ripped from a building that said "District Court of Kupres."

At least 475 dead in Egyptian floods, fires

DURUNKA, Egypt — Holding tight to his two children, Mohammed Abdel-Aal searched Thursday through the debris of his home, destroyed by the inferno that swept through this town in southern Egypt and killed at least 475 people.

Abdel-Aal and the two children escaped; his wife and a 2-year-old son may well have not. A day after a torrent of burning oil ravaged the town, they were still missing.

The tragedy in Durunka, 200 miles south of Cairo, came as the heaviest rains in 60 years lashed normally arid Egypt. More than 40 people were killed in floods that swept across the country, from the Sinai Peninsula in the east to the ancient temples of Luxor in the south.

In Durunka, a train carrying fuel oil derailed on track loosened by the torrential downpour. Electrical wires set the oil ablaze, and swirling flood waters carried the burning oil into the town of 22,000 people.

By Thursday afternoon, the death toll had jumped dramatically as officials said that in addition to 258 bodies already in morgues, about 220 other victims remained buried in the ruins. Those returning to Durunka feared the toll would rise even higher.

Congressmen who support term limits.

However, sources from the term limit defense camp say Bork probably won't fill such a prominent position.

Norman Leahy, a spokesman for U.S. Term Limits Inc., says the choice will most likely be between Arkansas Attorney General Winston Bryant and Washington, D.C., attorney John Kester, who have played a more active role in the case than Bork. A spokesman at Kester's firm agreed, calling the choice of Bork a "long shot."

The case is the first term limits litigation the Supreme Court has agreed to hear, and issues from a 1992 initiative allowing Arkansas legislators to appear on the ballot only if they have served less than two terms in the Senate or three terms in the House. Incumbents are not restricted from running as write-in candidates.

The initiative was passed with 60 percent of the vote — more than voted for Arkansian Bill Clinton as president.

Bobbie Hill, a member of the Arkansas League of Women Voters, was the first to challenge the constitutionality of the legislation on behalf of her organization. The League of Women Voters national platform opposes term limits except for the president.

Eventually the case reached the state Supreme Court, where term limits for state legislators were upheld, but limits on the candidacy of federal officials were determined to be unconstitutional. That decision prompted Term Limits Inc. to file a petition to the U.S. Supreme Court which was accepted in June.

Lee was the U.S. Solicitor General during the Reagan administration. While University president, the BYU Board of Trustees must approve each case he considers taking.

Local music scene booms with 'up and comings'

By BRYAN WURSTEN
Universe Staff Writer

In a state where the Osmonds and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir have defined the music scene for generations, a new wave of musical talent is threatening to wash over Utah's borders and sweep the nation.

"The local scene is really starting to boom," said Sean Boy Walton, disc jockey for X-96's "Local's Only" show.

"The momentum's been going forever but there's an excitement now that's mobilizing and motivating local musicians," Walton said.

With the quality of some of the local groups, it's only a matter of time before one of them gets signed by a major label, said Terry Xanthos, owner of Sonic Garden CD Exchange and a concert promoter.

"Then the whole area will be scouted by other national labels wondering 'What's going on in Provo,'" Xanthos said.

Xanthos and Walton said Ali Ali Oxen Free, Stretsch Armstrong, Peter Breinholdt and Big Parade, Agnes Poetry and The Obvious were some of the local bands most likely to be signed.

"Sooner or later, Salt Lake and Utah County will be noticed for what it has on a national level," said Mike South, guitarist for one of the most popular local bands, Stretsch Armstrong.

CD releases, radio play-time and attendance at concerts are all indicators of a music scene's strength, Xanthos said.

Based on those indicators, the Wasatch Front is doing very well.

"That's how the big bands got started, they got a local following, put out a CD and got on the radio," Xanthos said.

Many local bands are following the same trend, he said.

"Over 20 local groups have produced CDs and lots of them are getting played on X-96," Xanthos said.

Salt Lake radio station X-96 was mentioned by many people as one of the biggest factors in the local music scene's strength.

"X-96 has had a really big effect on local bands," said Randon Purcell, a member of Agnes Poetry.

Agnes Poetry was one of the first local groups to be played on X-96, and for a time was one of the top five requested bands on the station, Walton said.

"Right now The Obvious and Stretsch Armstrong are both in heavy rotation," Walton said.

Walton said X-96 is playing these bands because they're good, not just because they're local.

"If a national label had sent us these CDs we would still be playing them," Walton said.

X-96 isn't playing local groups just to be charitable, Xanthos said.

"This music is helping their ratings," Xanthos said.

Local bands are not only getting a large following on the airwaves, but also in their live concerts.

Over 1,900 people attended a Stretsch Armstrong concert at the Edge Dance Club Monday night, Xanthos said.

"Not many national acts could do that," Xanthos said.

Almost everyone involved with local music said the scene has seen great growth the last few years.

"Five years ago there was no scene," South said.

"Right now it's the best it's ever been," he said.

Walton said there was a time when he couldn't find good local music to fill a one hour show.

"Local bands are getting a lot more respect and the area is trying hard to be like Seattle," Purcell said referring to the recent Grunge movement that made Seattle famous in the music world.

It takes a mid-sized city that is intimate enough to develop its own specific music personality, Walton said.

Recipe for starting a band: love for music, dedication

By ALANA SCHIFFMAN
Universe Staff Writer

What does it take to get a band together and make it work?

"It's just a love for music. That's all it takes," said Travis McCandless, a civil engineering major from Seattle.

Three BYU students, known as Sand Dollars, have been together for two years performing at clubs and restaurants in Salt Lake City and for fund raisers. They classify themselves as instrumental and anything but "real traditional."

Success wasn't automatic, the members of Sand Dollars admit. The reception wasn't always good and they didn't always have support from people while they were starting out. The first restaurant they played in was in Salt Lake City. There was only one customer, Steed said, and they weren't paid.

"But that one customer tipped $10 and that made the trip to Salt Lake worth it," Steed said.

Band members agreed that Mama's Cafe in Provo was a good place to start performing and get a foot in the door.

"I wish there were more places like that," said McCandless. "I love to get out there and perform. I think I need to be absolutely perfect to go out there, but I don't, no one does."

Skip Siebers, manager of Mama's said that a person comes to him everyday wanting to play there.

"Getting up on stage and performing is half the battle," Siebers said.

Many young musicians who started out at Mama's are now pursuing music professionally, Siebers said.

Kim Simpson is in Austin, Texas.

Swim Pigs and Nectar are in San Francisco and have a CD coming out soon. Salt Licks, a blue grass band, won a competition in Nashville and received a recording contract.

Members of a recently formed band called Bonesack agree that Provo doesn't allow much variety in music.

"Mainly there's ska or there's nothing. It's too happy," said Bilal Ahmed, a computer science major from Pakistan, who is the lead guitarist of Bonesack.

"We're trying to do something that's different. We want a change."

"These people in Provo need to wake up. They don't give us a straight answer," said Marek Cerny, the lead singer of Bonesack from Houston, Texas, and the lead singer. "Why do they give us the runaround? Why don't they just be honest with us?"

Provo needs places where any band can play, the Bonesack members said.

"Mama's is good, but there needs to be more freedom," Ahmed said.

Provo doesn't allow much freedom concerning music, Cerny believes.

"It allows it a little, but not as much as it should," Cerny said.

Cerny has more futuristic ambitions with his purposes in music. "I've always wanted to be a groove child. When you can tell that people are getting into something you've created, that is one of the coolest feelings. This is something I have to do."

According to Maurice Briones, the assistant manager of Pier 54, "The most important thing is to make some kind of entertainment."

"They sound really good so that's why people like them so much," Briones said concerning popular bands in Provo.

Dancers compete in annual ball

By ALANA SCHIFFMAN
Universe Staff Writer

BYU Ballroom Dance Department presents their 21st annual Medals Ball and Dance Championship Nov. 4-5 in the Wilkinson Center Ballroom at 6:30 p.m.

Four hundred couples will compete, ranging in age from pre-teen to college age and will dance International Standard Ballroom, International Latin American and Americas style dancing. There will be dancing from the slow Rumba to the fast Quickstep to the traditional Waltz.

Friday night everyone performs, said Claudia Hill, promotional director for the ball. Saturday morning, preliminary rounds will be held at 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. Saturday.

"We usually have a sell-out crowd. Once they have been once, they often come back because they enjoy the event," Hill said concerning BYU students.

Hill said preparing to compete in the Medals Ball takes many additional hours of rehearsal and practice.

Mary Lyn Ball, one of the Amateur Latin competitors, said she competes for fun.

"Knowing that you're competing makes you want to improve your technique so you can hopefully place well at the ball," said Chris Witt, an International Standard Ballroom competitor.

"My partner, Megan and I, practice about three to four hours per week. This is besides our approximate 10 hours per week team rehearsal. We also take several private lessons to have an 'outside point of view.'"

There are seven adjudicators for the ball that will determine winners of the dance championship. Only one is from Utah.

"We think it is important to bring in outside judges for the ball to give our students the exposure, as well as expose the professional Ballroom world to BYU and our program," said Lee Wakefield, Division Director for the Ballroom Dance program.

"Each of the judges are a champion in their own right," Wakefield said. "This gives our students an opportunity of being judged by many different judges throughout their BYU career."

There are still good tickets available, Hill said. Reserved front row table seats are $10, reserved platform seats are $7 and general admission is $5. They are on sale from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Dance Ticket office or by calling 378-5859. There are also tickets available at the door.

Mark Benson, an employee of Pier 54 who schedules all of the live musical entertainment during the week and on weekends said that everyone booked in the next couple of months are known bands with a good reputation.

Approximately six months ago, the alternative and modern bands became big at Pier 54, Benson said.

"There's such a big following to that in the Provo valley. But acoustic is just as strong."

So, what does it take to make it in Provo?

Terry Xanthos, the owner of Sonic Garden CD Exchange said that a combination of talent and style make a band big in Provo.

Stretsch Armstrong, a ska band, is the most popular local band in Provo, Xanthos said. "They are incredibly fun and talented."

Other local bands making it in Provo are Ali Ali Oxen Free, Agnes Poetry, Peter Breinholt and Big Parade, Clover, Rosemary Wine, and The Obvious.

New bands that have a "decent following" are Sofa and Slackjaw, Xanthos said.

"It's the talent that makes a band last," Xanthos said.

Xanthos tries to make local bands feel like they are bigger.

If a band gets a CD out, that's what is going to make them go way ahead, Xanthos said. X-96, one of the best alternative stations in the nation, plays Stretsch Armstrong four times a day.

"That's what sells records," Xanthos said.

Talent isn't enough anymore, Steed said.

"You can't just play music to play music," Steed said.

"Talent is nice but the more I hear bands, the more I know that you don't need talent, you just need something to communicate."

"To make it you need to blend in and that's sad," Cerny said.

"I think a lot of people consider music background noise. Music should move you."

Ahmed agrees. "If your band members aren't serious, you can't go anywhere," Ahmed said.

"There is a large gap between a garage band, you know, someone who is just doing it to do it, and raw talent," Siebers said.

"Local bands are doing what they need to do to make it," Xanthos said. "People need to appreciate local music more and become aware of the scene."

There are a lot of clean bands that are really good."

McCandless's advice is simple. "Forget all the rules. Just do it."

Synthesis, student jazz band to perform tonight at BYU

Universe Services

Synthesis, BYU's world-touring premier student jazz band, will perform Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall.

Faculty vocalist Kathryn L. Little and BYU's vocal jazz ensemble, The Syncopations, will join Synthesis on several songs.

Tickets at $4 for students, faculty and staff and $6 for the general public. Tickets can be purchased from the Fine Arts Ticket Office. Call 378-4322 for more information.

Synthesis will play a wide range of hits, including "Eager Beaver," "Opus in Chartreuse," "Dynaflow," "Artistry in Rhythm," and "Malaguea" by Stan Kenton.

They will also play new music from Pat Metheny's recording "Secret Stories," including "See the World" rescored for a big band.

Little will sing an arrangement of "Oh What a Beautiful Morning" and an updated version of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" and The Syncopations will perform with the band in Jerome

Y has strong showing with 8 students in Miss Utah Valley Pageant Saturday

By ERIC D. DIXON
Universe Staff Writer

Contestants from throughout Utah, including eight BYU students, will compete in the Miss Utah Valley Pageant on Saturday evening.

The current Miss Utah Valley, Melissa Anderson, a senior in Spanish and Russian, will give up her crown to the new winner as part of the pageant.

She will co-host the pageant and sing two songs.

This year's theme is "A Salute to America," said Chad Hulet, the Miss Utah Valley Pageant director.

"We're using old-fashioned American songs, patriotic songs from the 20s, from movies and Broadway," he said.

The winner of the pageant will work on community service projects as part of her duties, said Diane Kitteridge, the pageant's director of public relations.

"She will speak to youth groups, civic groups," Kitteridge said. "She needs to focus on service in the community."

Jennifer Kerns, a BYU sophomore, won the service project award for her project on seatbelt awareness in the Miss America Pageant this year, which earned her a $5,000 scholarship.

Although she didn't compete in the Miss America Pageant herself, her service project was submitted to the national pageant by the Miss Utah Pageant.

The pageant was originally created because there wasn't a pageant for BYU students that led to the Miss America Pageant, Hulet said. The Miss Utah Valley Pageant leads to the Miss Utah Pageant, which leads to the Miss America Pageant.

This year, the pageant will award $1,500 in scholarship money to participants.

Although most of the participants in the pageant come from BYU, the pageant is open to girls throughout Utah who have won in their local pageants.

The pageant is judged on the same four areas of competition that the Miss Utah and Miss America pageants are judged.

The scores are based 40 percent on talent, 30 percent on a personal interview, 15 percent on evening wear and 15 percent on swimsuit.

Eight BYU students are participating in the upcoming pageant. T. Kennick, DaNae Robinson, Pat Craft, Tara Allen, Holly Orton, Marie Yokonich, Jodi Reynosa, Priscilla Packard will compete.

The pageant will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Payson High School auditorium, at 1050 S. M. Admission is $5.

BYU to face Division I newcomer

KEENDAAHL JOHNSON
Universe Sports Writer

East Louisiana will come to Saturday to continue its initial Division I-A football. The past six years, the Indians have been a national power. In 1987, they won the national title and the playoffs three other times. In 1992, NLU began its move to Division I. The move is financially. It also helps the university and increases the school's recruiting better players, NLU Head Coach Ed Johnson said. In 1992, NLU had to schedule I-A opponents for each of the four years. The person in charge of making the schedule was Johnson. The season began, The News rated it the toughest in the nation. Johnson said, "I didn't make the idea — it was my idea — but I said, 'This is his first year as coach at NLU. He came to Michigan State, where he was the linebacker and kicker coach. He knew his work would be cut out for him."

"I looked forward to being head coach but I knew it was going to be tough," he said. "We will be good with time and when we get our scholarships up. There is a lot of interest in football in this area."

In the Indians inaugural season at the I-A level, they have had a dismal 1-7 record. Their only win was a 62-37 victory over Weber State, and now they face No. 25 BYU, the third nationally-ranked team the Indians have played.

Earlier in the season, they faced then No. 8 Colorado, losing 48-13, and then No. 12 Auburn, losing 44-12. They were also hammered by Georgia 70-6.

The offense is sparked by wide receiver Stepfret Williams, who has broken three school records. Williams has the most 100-yard games (11), most consecutive 100-yard games (5) and most career touchdown receptions with 18.

He is averaging 105 yards per game, good enough to rank him 6th in the nation.

Defensively, the Indians have struggled, but are improving. Through the season's first three weeks, opponents were racking up nearly 600 yards a game. However, in the last four games, the Indians were allowing 418 yards a game.

One of the main reasons for the improvement is the play of defensive tackle Shawn King, who has been invited to play in the Hula Bowl all-star game at the end of the season.

Despite NLU's 1-7 record, Cougar Coach LaVell Edwards does not underestimate the Indians. He said it was an important game for the Cougars and after last week's "flat" performance against Arizona State, the team must crank it up to play better.

"We've got to make sure we are ready to play, become more focused and play harder," Edwards said.

Zaunbrecher is worried that the BYU loss to Arizona State may give the Cougars added incentive to perform well.

"They have an excellent football team that didn't play well last week and they could come out fired up to make amends for that."

Cougar coach goes for 700th volleyball win

By ANGIE CURTIS
Universe Sports Writer

Standing in first place after defeating its main conference competitors last weekend, the BYU women's volleyball team heads east this weekend to take on WAC opponents Colorado State and Wyoming.

The 11th-ranked Cougars eased past Colorado State in their first-round matchup but were taken to a close five-game match by the Cowboys of Wyoming earlier this season.

"It's always tough on the road in the WAC," said BYU Head Coach Elaine Michaelis. "Colorado State has improved since the last time we played them, and we traditionally have trouble with Wyoming in Laramie. We'll have to be focused for both matches."

Winning the next two matches means a great deal to Michaelis. In nearly 26 years of recorded intercollegiate play, Michaelis has led the Cougars to 698 wins, just two victories shy of the 700 mark that only three other Division I coaches have achieved. With two more wins, she will not only earn her 700th victory, but log her 21st straight season with 20 or more wins.

All-American Charlene Johnson, BYU's all-time assist leader, is just 92 assists away from 5,000 for her career.

Remembering the champs

1984-94 10 Years ago:

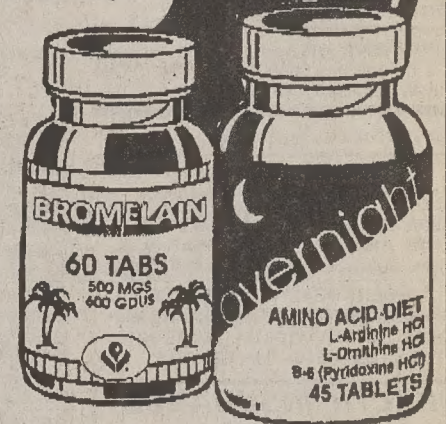

BYU: 42
UTEP: 9

WEEK 10: BYU clinched at least a tie for the WAC crown in beating the Miners. Robbie Bosco threw four TD passes in three quarters, while tailback Kelly Smith rushed for 106 yards and a TD. Linebacker Kurt Gouveia had 11 tackles along with an interception. At 9-0 overall, BYU ranked No. 4 in both the AP and UPI polls.

add size, length for 95 season

CHRIS GULSTAD
Universe Sports Writer

Jazz enter the 1994-95 season at a crossroads, with old warriors Malone and John Stockton making another attempt to take their game to the NBA championship before their time runs out.

Malone and Stockton have perfected the two-man game, making the fundamental pick and roll a dangerous weapon. They are the standard when it comes to half-court basketball. The Jazz remain for the Jazz is that this two-man game can win a championship.

Malone says no. Ever since Magic Johnson came into the league and the Los Angeles Lakers brought show-biz to the NBA, championship teams have had their styles. Up-tempo basketball backed up with smothering defense became the standard.

Management has begun to realize that if Malone and Stockton are going to bring a championship to the team, they need the right complement of players along for the ride. The Jazz have Bryon Russell, David Benoit and Walter Bond have all been part of the Jazz youth and athleticism.

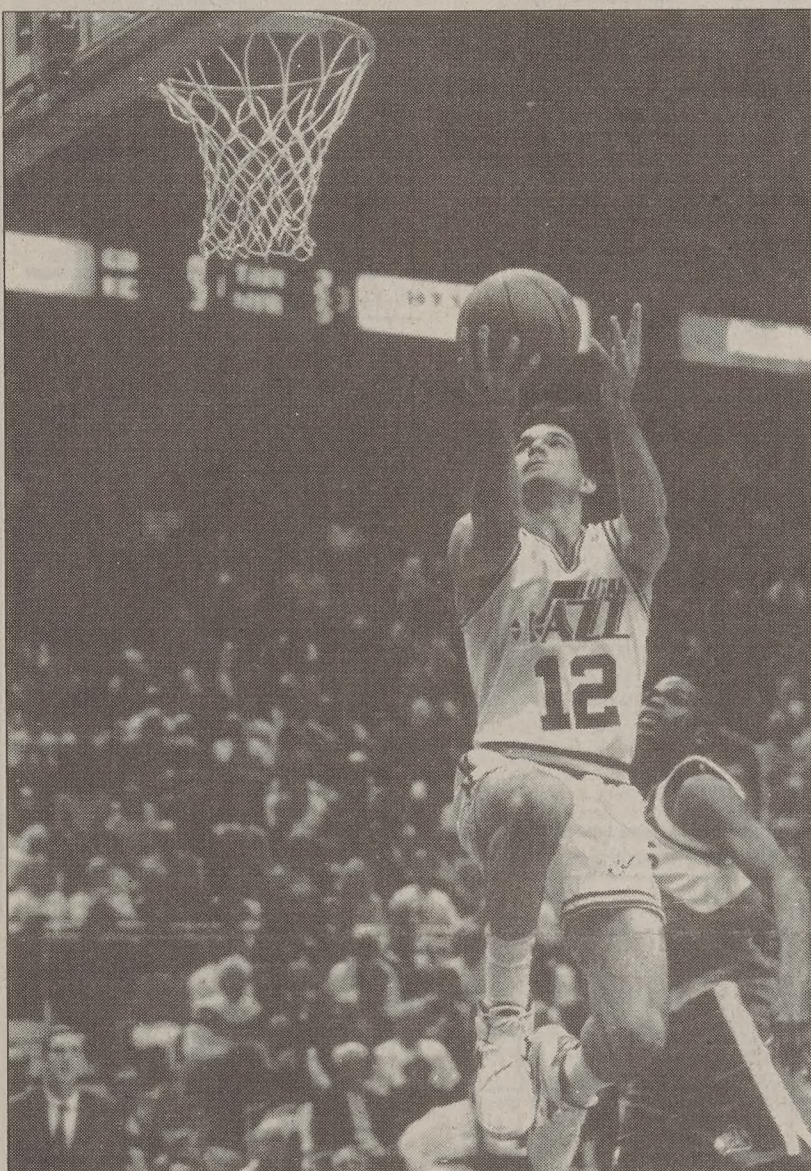

Malone and Stockton they dumped the aging players for Jeff Hornacek. Hornacek brings experience and court savvy. After a year with the team, Hornacek feels more comfortable with the Jazz offensive system.

Malone and Stockton have given Felton Spencer and Antonio Davis help this season. The additions of Adam Keefe and Bob Carr. Both were brought in to add some front-court muscle.

Malone is big and strong, and Carr has quick leaping ability. Combined, they should be able to provide the Jazz with the help that Tom Chambers hasn't been able to give.

Malone's championship is about the only one for that Malone and Stockton have achieved in their careers. Malone's spat with Larry Miller, who seems to be even more driven than Malone in past seasons for a championship should break Magic Johnson's assist record this season, and Malone will not be as immortalized as Johnson if he doesn't have an NBA championship to his name.

Malone's coach said that last year Jerry Sloan would have been the coach of the Jazz because he got the most out of the team. If that is true, Sloan should be in a better job this year.

Cristina Houston/Daily Universe

LITTLE GENERAL: Jazz All-Star guard John Stockton should break Magic Johnson's all-time assist mark this season.

WOMEN AND THE MEDIA: JoAnn Valenti addresses the topic of women and the media Thursday at a Brown Bag luncheon sponsored by the Women's Research Institute.

Media usage decisions based on experience

By TEONEI SALWAY
Universe Staff Writer

Stone's "Natural Born Killers" did not make Nathan Phillips kill, said JoAnn Valenti, communications professor. The movie about serial murders starring Woody Harrelson might have influenced the actions Martinez is charged with, but the 17-year-old murder suspect would not have killed his step mother and half brother had he not had a predisposition to violence, Valenti said. Recently, women in the Church of Christ of Latter-day Saints do not necessarily act upon what they see in television because reactions to messages stem from previous experience, she said. Valenti and Dan Stout, also a professor of communications, talked about the search of diverse media use by LDS women at a brown bag luncheon Thursday sponsored by the Women's Research Institute. The level and other accumulated experiences affect attitudes about media more than religion. Valenti said. "What you bring to the table makes every difference in the world." The effects of television, newspaper, radio and movies based on analysis of the medium is not the same, because the way people receive varies, Stout said. Valenti and Stout surveyed approximately 1,900 LDS women representing mostly western states, Valenti said.

Part of Stout's survey asked open-ended questions that allowed for discussion on TV shows that some felt were unfavorable because they were inconsistent with LDS values, while others appreciated them because they taught consequences of poor choices, he said.

"The whole stereotype that religious audiences tend to be somewhat homogeneous is an invalid assumption when we look at this sample," Stout said.

Valenti divided audiences into three categories: adventurous, impulsive and rebellious.

People in the adventurous category are highly educated, Valenti said. They use media to make decisions to control their lives, she said.

Impulsive people are less educated and do not see the relationship between their actions and consequences; they believe in fate rather than personal control, she said. Gender is also a key factor in predicting reactions, Valenti said.

Education is not as important in seeing who is in the rebellious group, she said. This group does not trust authority and uses the media selectively when making decisions, she said.

The media use different tactics to get messages to each of these groups, and though they can trigger and reinforce ideas, they cannot change people, Valenti said.

Valenti and Stout's research will be published in the summer of 1995, and they will teach a class called "Communication and Gender" this winter in which they will discuss their research and other issues, Stout said.

'Provisional status' category no longer exists for faculty

By GAYLON GARBETT
Senior Reporter

BYU faculty members who were classified under the title "provisional status" in the University's faculty review process were notified in October that they will no longer be grouped in that category.

A letter from the office of Alan L. Wilkins, associate academic vice president for faculty, said revisions in BYU's policy on rank and status, which was revised in July, will erase the provisional status category.

The policy is retroactive and will apply to all faculty placed in the category by previous evaluations, which extends back to 1992. The provisional status category was not used last year, Wilkins said.

Wilkins said the policy change is part of a larger set of changes made in a 1992 policy on rank and status.

"It was a review we had intended to do when the policy came out in 1992," Wilkins said.

Brent Harker, associate director of BYU Public Communications, said part of the reason the title "provisional status" was removed was due to redundancy. Until a six-year review is completed and faculty members are granted continuing status, the status of all faculty members is basically provisional, he said.

Wilkins said despite the removal of the provisional status category, review committees will continue to raise concerns regarding candidates.

Under the new policy, candidates will not be required to submit the letters from their three-year review that indicated review committee concerns and specified whether the candidate was on provisional status.

"All they need to do is list the kinds of concerns that were raised in the third-year review and address them," Wilkins said.

Administrating inequality?

A comparison of successful female and male administrative candidates shows that women are often more qualified than their male counterparts but hold fewer school administrative positions.

Holding positions	Master's degree	EdD/PhD degree	Median teaching years
20.1%	68.8%	18.6%	11
79.9%	61.3%	16.7%	9

The above graph is a corrected reprint from Tuesday's edition, which showed erroneous percentages of men and women holding school administrative positions.

THE STAFF OF WILSON DIAMONDS

TRY US ON FOR SIZE

Welcome to the staff at Wilson Diamonds.

The most common compliment we get is that people here are "different." We've also been told they're more friendly, patient, and knowledgeable. Which isn't surprising because we never talk about how to "close" a sale, just how to best serve customers. We consider pressure a poor substitute for substance. That's why for the past 19 years our customers have consistently recommended us to their friends.

Of course, it's easy for our people to be genuine and warm. With our guaranteed prices, huge selection of quality rings, unmatched guarantees, and liberal return policy, they are unthreatened at letting you look around and compare.

So why find a ring style at a place you'd rather not do business?

Whether you're casually looking or wanting to do serious price comparisons, try us on for size. We think you'll like the fit.

ATTEMPTED ABDUCTION

A 19-year-old female student from the parking lot of the football practice field after stalking her through Nov. 1.

The suspect grabbed the victim from behind and tried to force her into the car. She was getting out of the car when the suspect grabbed her, causing her to fall. During the struggle she succeeded in getting out of the car with her keys. The suspect fled the scene with her keys. The suspect is currently being sought by the police.

A woman who sustained minor facial injuries from the impact of the car, told police that throughout the incident she had been left on her car. Two of the notes found in her car were parked on campus and one while she was at the University Mall. The notes included the victim's name. The victim told University police the man's dark sweat shirt appeared to have the letter C on it and he was wearing dark gloves.

THEFT

An 18 inch to 20 inch pink Huffy bicycle with a pink oversize seat was taken from the bike rack outside of the Eyring Science Center on Oct. 31 shortly before noon. The victim, a male student, said the unlocked bicycle was valued at $5.

A male visitor was given a misdemeanor citation for attempting to take a 2¢ cent chocolate bar from the BYU Bookstore on Oct. 29 at 5:30 p.m.

A female student who left her purse on a table at the library for 5 minutes returned to find that it had been taken. The purse contained a $250 calculator, $200 organizer-planner, $250 in cash and miscellaneous ID cards. The incident took place around 3 p.m. Oct. 26.

ASSAULT

A woman reported that her husband slapped her while they were in their car Oct. 30 around 6 p.m. The incident took place near Wymount Terrace, where the couple live. After the man slapped his wife, she got out of the car and ran to a neighbor's home. University police were called by the neighbor.

Two male students were involved in a scuffle Nov. 1 at 9 p.m. in Merrill Hall after one had been the victim of numerous pranks inflicted by the other student. University police turned the matter over to on-campus housing.

VERBAL ASSAULT

A male student who was not allowed into the Morris Center cafeteria because he was wearing a sleeveless shirt returned after changing and threatened to assault the female teacher who had asked him to change. The incident took place Oct. 26 at 5:45 p.m.

ACCIDENT

University police responded to a call from the parents of a 16-month-old child who fell 3 or 4 feet from his crib and lost consciousness Oct. 29 at 4:40 p.m. When emergency assistance arrived at the Wymount complex, they found the child had regained consciousness.
